

Parent survey on High School choices.

Between November 23 and 30, parents of current Barton 8th graders were surveyed in order to get a sense of which high school they expected their students to choose, and to gather information on questions about the schools and the process they felt were still unanswered.

The “unanswered questions” have been consolidated into a FAQ document elsewhere on the Barton web site. The chart below shows the responses to the question about expected high school choices.

The bars represent the number of respondents (out of 42 responses) who expect their child to choose each school. South received the most responses (25) followed by Southwest (12), Washburn (2) and “Still Unsure” (3).

The colors on the bar represent the home attendance areas of the respondents (see the key to the right).

The 42 responses represent a little more than half of the number of eighth graders currently at Barton.
